About the Collection

The Developmental Disorders Resource Center at the Greenwood County Library aims to provide support to the special needs community through much-needed materials on autism, the autism spectrum, and other development disorders. Topics include teaching social skills, behavioral therapy, conflict resolution, and community awareness and interaction.

Who can use the Collection?

Although the Collection is located in the Children's Room of the Greenwood County Library, the materials are appropriate for use by children, teens, adults and parents, teachers and caregivers.

What's in the Collection

The DDRC includes books, CDs, DVDs, and educational toys and games available for loan and in-library use. The Collection includes works by Temple Grandin and Tony Attwood.

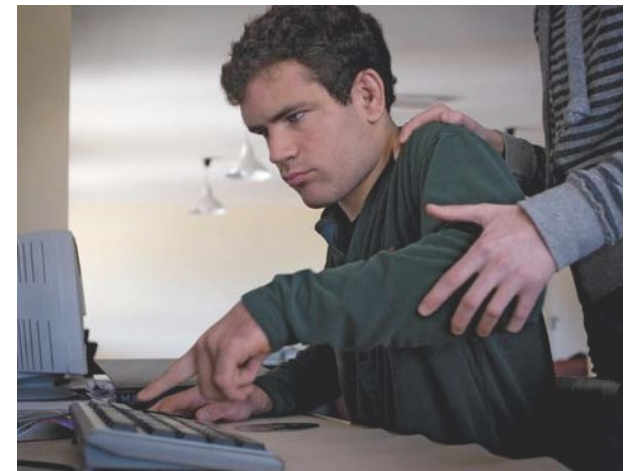

A social storybook of a visit to the Greenwood County Library has been designed and is available as well.
