The Creative Writing Club at SLRHS
will present their work

The Creative Writing Club at SLRHS meets two or three times a month to share their work. The students, grades 9-12, present their stories, novels in progress, poetry, and songs to the other members for a round of discussion. Writers get a chance for feedback and constructive criticism from their peers. Faculty members occasionally stop by for a session and, this year, the Club was lucky enough to meet with local Amazon best-selling author Kevin Symmons, and New York Times best-selling author Dean Palmer.
