What I'm Reading - Karla Buckborough

Born a crime : stories from a South African childhood

by Trevor Noah

The host of The Daily Show With Trevor Noah traces his wild coming of age during the twilight of apartheid in South Africa and the tumultuous days of freedom that followed, offering insight into the farcical aspects of the political and social systems of today's world.

Whether I should admit it or not, over the years I have become a fan of Trevor Noah on "The Daily Show". His social/political commentary is insightful and cutting (depending on which side of the political arena you favour). This is the April selection for my book club - of which I have been a member for more than 15 years. One of the women in my group is from Southern Africa - we value her choices of books that highlight Africa. Other recommendations from her have been "When a crocodile eats the sun" by Peter Godwin - a fascinating look at the decline of Zimbabwe.

Noah's writing is very similar to his comedic delivery on "The Daily Show". Each chapter begins with a short monologue and then the "story" behind the incident is explained in the rest of the chapter. From childhood escapades to his career as a hustler to his life in America, Noah has had a remarkable life that reads like fiction.

Cleaning the collection

Out with the old, in with the new

"Books that don't circulate are expensive wallpaper"

To make room for the new, we are carefully going through the collection to remove books that are not being used.

Now we need your help: what kind of books do you want in the library?

Do you use books about cooking, gardening, self-help? Do you read about history? Help us shape the collection.

We are open to suggestions - let us know at the desk.
